

The Chef
John Sincilar

His Restaurants
Longway Tavern and Barvee Proof, in New Orleans

What he's known for Taking the bar for fall food in a city that loves its cocktails. Swapping out the stodgey fried fare in favor of fresh, produce-packed alternatives.

Pea, Cauliflower and Country Ham Casserole

COMFORT FOOD has its limits. Assuredly (and deliciously), better and cream temper the sting of winter's most biting weeks, but it's easy to overdo it, too. "So let's make something you don't regret at all afterwards," said chef John Sincilar. At Longway Tavern in New Orleans, he maps sweet peas and country ham in a puree-cauliflower "cream." In his second slow Food Post recipe, adapted for home cooks, the whole thing bakes in the oven until the buttery breadcrumb topping goes all crispy and golden. It amounts to something very much like a vegetable pot pie, minus the flaky pastry and pot-herb

- Total Time 35 minutes
 - Serves 4-6
 - 3 tablespoons butter
 - ½ cup breadcrumbs or panko
 - Kosher salt
 - 1 medium head cauliflower
 - 4 cups milk
 - 7 ounces country ham or prosciutto, finely diced
 - 1 tablespoon olive oil
 - 10 ounces frozen English peas, thawed
 - ½ lemon
- 1. Preheat oven to 450 degrees. In a small pot, melt half the butter. Off heat, toss in breadcrumbs and a pinch of salt. Set breadcrumbs aside.

- 2. Roughly chop cauliflower into 1-inch pieces. Transfer to a medium pot and add enough milk to cover cauliflower. Bring to a simmer over medium-high heat. Continue simmering, adjusting heat as needed to avoid bubbling over, until cauliflower is very tender, about 10 minutes. Strain cauliflower and return to pot, reserving cooking liquid. Set aside.
- 3. While cauliflower cooks, heat olive oil in a medium sauté pan over medium-low heat; add ham and sauté until browned, about 3 minutes.
- 4. Transfer half the cooked cauliflower to a food processor or blender and season with salt. Add remaining butter and 1½ cups reserved cooking liquid. Puree until totally smooth, with the consistency of a thickened (but pourable) If needed, blend in more cooking liquid.
- 5. Stir peas and ham into remaining cooked cauliflower in pot. Toss in enough puree to generously coat and bind ingredients. Season with salt and lemon juice. Transfer to a 10-inch baking dish and top with a thick layer of buttered breadcrumbs. Bake on middle rack until filling sets and top is golden brown, about 10 minutes.

POD HELP US Frozen peas bring a welcome pop of green to winter dishes. Here their sweetness plays nicely off the salty ham.

PHOTO: JEFFREY MAYER/ISTOCKPHOTO.COM; STYLING: JESSICA WATSON/ISTOCKPHOTO.COM